

Two Degrees Of Separation

I grew up with both parents who also grew up with both of their parents. My Mother worked and my Dad, together they are the perfect couple and the same was true for my grandparents. They married young, raised a family with no outside children, and built homes. As I grew in this truth and am now also married, I start to think about how long it took me to even desire those things and even more, why?

My Grandmother and her sisters all married and had families, so did my mom and her sisters. However, this was not true for my sisters and I or my female cousins. It was even a joke between us all. Most of them had children and if married they divorced. It was crazy and I always wondered why this was.

Now in the truth and married, along with being blessed to be around other aged women, I now know the why. Although my Grandparents taught my Mother and Father the same values, theirs taught them there was a new thing on the earth, feminism which caused this offset.

My parents grew up in the 60's and 70's a time where being an independent woman was widespread. Education was the focus and not needing a man pushed. The conversations of virtue, abstinence, family, the past, and more was left to the schools to teach and what's crazy is that we were in the church non-stop with no aid there.

Two generations of knowledge lost all because of feminism. So much so that in my worldly life I never considered marriage. Now the reforming of my mind is in place and now the undoing of that independent spirit. I thank God for this truth and the guidance to convert from things taught. If blessed with a daughter there will not be a third degree of separation.

Acts 3:19 KJV ¹⁹ Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord.
